The proposal is expected to include the following three main sections:

1. Introduction

- Provide relevant background information to contextualize the issue and clearly define the problem you intend to address.
- Briefly review key existing studies, policies, or practices in related fields, and identify a clear gap your proposal aims to fill.
- Specify the target group(s) you aim to support, and clearly state your research objectives in alignment with relevant Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).
- Highlight the value and significance of your proposal and indicate its potential impacts.

2. Proposal

- Clarify your role and responsibilities in supporting the identified group(s), and identify key stakeholders involved in the initiative/action plan.
- State the research methods used to investigate the issue, and present feasible and specific measures to address the problem.
- Justify your plan with robust evidence (e.g., examples, testimonies, statistics, case studies) and use effective visual aids (e.g., tables or figures) when appropriate.
- Anticipate major obstacles (e.g., funding, coordination, promotion, implementation) and propose practical strategies to overcome them, while highlighting what makes your proposal innovative and distinct.

3. Conclusion

- Restate the key measures or action plan of your proposal.
- Identify the desired outcomes and expected benefits for the target group(s).
- Emphasize the significance, originality, and broader impact of the proposal, explaining how it advances inclusion in line with Leaving No-One Behind.
